That's a wrap:
Bluesfest hits
new record

Twentieth year. Ten days, 200 bands, five stages, 300,000 people

RBC's Ottawa Bluesfest closed out its 20th year on Sunday night by setting yet another attendance record.

This year, an estimated 300,000 fans visited LeBreton Flats to see concerts by 200 bands and musical artists — but in the end, it was appearances by headlining acts Lady Gaga, Blake Shelton, Snoop Dogg and The Killers that pushed the total attendance to record levels.

Official numbers for the 10-day festival will be released by organizers in a couple of weeks.

Something about a re-configured stage layout (to relieve congestion down the middle) and a plethora of nostalgic events (to mark the festival's 20th) helped improve the experience this year, said Bluesfest executive artistic director Mark Monahan.

"The 20th anniversary celebrations were well received by the fans because almost everyone has a favourite Bluesfest memory," he said.

For Monahan, Sunday's closing night with the Sam Roberts Band playing the festival out was full of mixed feelings.

"There's a certain exhaust-tion after 10 days of working non-stop and a sense of accomplishment that we made it through," he said. "But I'm also disappointed that it's all over, that we're done with that one, now let's get on with the next."

The festival saw a little bit of everything for almost every kind of music fan. There was a bit of blues, courtesy of Canadian badass Matt Andersen, some funk from Toronto's The Digs and even some Chinese Reggae thrown down by Long Shen Dao.

"I'm not sure if I'll still be with Bluesfest 20 years from now, but I sure want to try," added Monahan.

Bus crash

City to retire route 76 in honour of those killed

Ottawa will retire bus route 76 to commemorate six people who died in a tragic Via Rail-bus collision in Barrhaven last September.

In a memo, Mayor Jim Watson says a plaque will also be installed to honour those killed in the crash. Flags at city facilities will be flown at half-staff on Sept. 18, the one-year anniversary of the collision.

Watson said he has been talking with the families of those who died about creating a "lasting memorial."

Man found guilty of terrorism-related charges

Former Ottawa hospital technician Misbahuddin Ahmed has been found guilty of two terrorism-related charges but has been acquitted on a third, more serious count.

Ahmed was convicted of conspiring to knowingly facilitate a terrorist activity and participation in the activities of a terrorist group.

The 30-year-old was found not guilty of possession of explosives with intent to do harm.

Ahmed faced a maximum sentence of 14 years in prison on the conspiracy charge and life in prison for the explosive device count.

It didn't take long for demolition crews to take down the Sir John Carling building Sunday morning — about seven seconds actually.

Hundreds of people gathered outside the safety perimeter at 930 Carling Ave. at 7 a.m. Sunday to watch the $4.8-million demolition.

One of the spectators had historic ties to the 11-storey building that became home to Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada in 1967.

Retired public servant Len Heitin spent many days in the building when he worked for the Department of Agriculture (now Agriculture Canada) in 1967, and then again in the early '70s.

The 74-year-old Stittsville resident watched his former office implode from the outdoor deck of the Baja Grill restaurant at Dow's Lake Pavilion.

"I came to Ottawa in September 1967, (and) the building was already open," said Heitin, who worked there until the following spring, when he was transferred.

"Then I came back and worked (at the Sir John Carling building) again from 1971 until 1973."

Suspect in fatal prom night stabbing arrested in Toronto

Danny Volpi says his son can rest in peace following the arrest of the lead suspect in his prom-night killing.

Devontay Hackett, 18, was arrested in Toronto at around 2:30 p.m. on Friday following a month-long Canada-wide warrant for his arrest.

He was wanted on a second-degree murder charge for the death of Brandon Volpi, who was also 18.

Hackett appeared in court over the weekend.

"It doesn't bring my son back, but at least now he's crossed over," said Danny Volpi. The "frustrating" month of waiting for Hackett's arrest is over, he said.

The fight involved about 20 people.

Friends and family have said Volpi — who his father describes as a "gentle giant" — stepped in to help someone else. But there have been different accounts of what happened and what led to the fight.

Hackett had been in hiding since the incident.

He has yet to be tried in court but is due to appear by video on Saturday.

Ottawa police would not speculate on why Hackett went to Toronto, as that's part of the ongoing investigation. LUCY SCHOLEY/METRO

Hang Up Help Out. Pop-up event to collect clothes for homeless

Local event co-ordinator Catherine Landry, no stranger to startups, is launching the city's first Hang Up Help Out, a clothing donation event for the homeless.

Landry is the mastermind behind Cherry Pie Events and the women's networking event Ladies Who Lunch.

Her latest idea occurred to her when she came across a Facebook post about a similar event in South Africa. Once she had the plan, Landry reached out to the community for support, and the response was overwhelming.

"It was incredible," she said. "Everything's just happened really quickly, really organically and really kindly."

The event will be accepting gently used and clean clothing, bedding and fully packaged toothpaste and shampoo.

The event will take place on July 27 in downtown Ottawa from 12 to 5 p.m. at Kania Studio & Boutique on 145 York St. and Bells Corners Zolas Restaurant on 2194 Robertson Rd.

In Barrhaven, the event runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Stronger You on 3570 Strandherd Dr. AMY YEE/FOR METRO

Casualties mount over weekend as Ukraine continues assault

Under siege. Military uses airstrikes, artillery fire to battle pro-Russian insurgency in the east

Russia's foreign ministry said Sunday that a Ukrainian shell hit a Russian border town, killing one person and seriously injuring two others. Ukraine denied firing a shell into Russian territory.

President Vladimir Putin expressed "grave concern" over the incident, Russian news agencies quoted his spokesman as saying. A statement from Russia's foreign ministry labelled the event a "provocation" and warned of the possibility of "irreversible consequences, the responsibility for which lies on the Ukrainian side."

Russia said the shell hit the courtyard of a residential building in the Russian town of Donetsk — near the Ukrainian city of the same name that has become a rebel stronghold — early on Sunday. Ukraine's restless east has been mired in a pro-Russian separatist insurgency against the Kyiv government.

Ukrainian officials denied that any Ukrainian shells had fallen on Russian territory. Andriy Lysenko, a spokesman for Ukraine's National Security and Defence Council, placed blame for the attack on the rebels themselves.

Ukraine's Donetsk, where rebels have gathered to regroup after a major Ukrainian offensive last week, was quiet on Sunday. But some 150 people from the settlement of Maryinka, on the outskirts of the city, were moving into dormitories at a local university after their homes were bombed during the night.

Artillery fire in Maryinka late on Friday left at least four people dead, but the number of casualties in the latest bombing was unclear.

Ukrainian defence officials said Sunday that the air force had performed 16 sorties and carried out five airstrikes on rebel positions over Saturday.

Interfax-Ukraine cited Lysenko on Sunday as saying that several dozen rebels had

Quebec announces additional $60 million for Lac-Mégantic

Quebec is granting an additional $60 million to compensate victims of last year's catastrophic train derailment in Lac-Mégantic, which left 47 people dead.

Municipal Affairs Minister Pierre Moreau told a news conference that $37 million of the amount would go to the owners of businesses in the disaster area.

A large swath of Lac-Mégantic's downtown was destroyed when a runaway train loaded with volatile fuel oil jumped the tracks and exploded.

The government says it heard the complaints of those affected by the disaster in the town of 6,000 and wanted to bring some balance to the treatment of their cases.

Business owners had complained they weren't getting help fast enough.

Moreau says there will be meetings this week with 37 business owners and that the compensation is available now.

There will be incentives offered to owners who want to rebuild their businesses in Lac-Mégantic.

Moreau says if they wish to leave the area, they will be compensated for their sites

Battle over safety regulations

A string of fiery train derailments has triggered a high-stakes and behind-the-scenes campaign to shape how government responds to calls for tighter safety rules.

- Billions of dollars are riding on how these rules are written, and lobbyists from the railroads, tank car manufacturers and the oil, ethanol and chemical industries have met more than a dozen times since mid-May 2014 with officials at the White House and the U.S. Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration. Their universal message: don't make us pay for increased safety — that's another industry's problem.

Military targets. Most Palestinian casualties in recent days were civilians

The target was the Gaza police chief. He survived the Israeli airstrike on a cousin's home with critical injuries, but 18 family members were killed, including five children and teens.

The weekend attack highlighted Israel's broad definition of military targets in its current offensive against the Islamic militant group Hamas. The army says those targets include senior Hamas activists and their homes, even as it insists it is doing the utmost to spare bystanders by warning them to clear out.

However, the UN Office for Humanitarian Affairs said Sunday that civilians made up the majority of Palestinian casualties over the past six days — 133 of 168 killed and nearly half of more than 1,100 wounded. A human-rights researcher said some of Israel's strikes appear to have violated rules of war.

The issue of Israel's targets cuts to the core of conflicting narratives.

Palestinians — and not just those loyal to Hamas — say Israel is punishing all of Gaza's 1.7 million people and is killing civilians with impunity.

Gaza Strip conflict.

Thousands flee homes amid bombings as Israel prepares possible ground invasion

Thousands of Palestinian residents of the northern Gaza Strip fled their homes on Sunday and sought safety in UN shelters, heeding warnings from the Israeli military about impending plans to bomb the area in the sixth day of an offensive against Hamas that has killed more than 160 people.

The fighting showed no signs of slowing, despite international calls for a ceasefire and growing concerns about the mounting civilian death toll in Gaza. U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry spoke to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and voiced "readiness" to help restore calm, while Egypt, a key mediator between Israel and Hamas, continued to work behind the scenes.

Amid the diplomacy, Israel said it was pushing forward with preparations for a possible ground invasion of Gaza. Thousands of troops have massed along the border in recent days.

"We don't know when the operation will end," Netanyahu told his cabinet on Sunday. "It might take a long time." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Can BlackBerry rise from the ashes?

HOW TO ROLL
Alison Griffiths

Future on hold
3.8%

BlackBerry had 43 per cent of the U.S. cellphone market in 2010. Today's market share: 3.8 per cent.

gle, Samsung and the Nasdaq itself in the first half of 2014. Bully for those who took the chance last summer.

But back to the smouldering ruins of this formerly great company. Is there any real reason to buy now or, for that matter, to hold? The latter is a particularly important question for investors who have made a nice gain in the last few months.

If there is hope for BlackBerry, it likely lies in one place: software.

Wait a minute! BlackBerry's claim to fame has always been hardware, the phone that U.S. President Barack Obama loves.

But all of BlackBerry's post-recession failures have been in hardware. From last year's delayed Z10 phone to the PlayBook tablet all the way back to the Bold phone — which the iPhone quickly stomped into oblivion — it has been hardware that keeps tripping up BlackBerry.

Though the new, very square (literally) BlackBerry Passport smartphone is launching in September, CEO John Chen is racing to dominate the Internet of Things with software that will seamlessly connect your entire life to the Internet. He has made a number of moves in that direction since taking over the helm last November.

Aside from anything else, if Chen is even marginally successful and manages to staunch BlackBerry's cash bleed, he will turn the company from a short seller's delight into a takeover target.

MY OWN PRIVATE ORGAWORLD

I sometimes think I need a personal auditor general—and perhaps some other staff around the house the AG could blame on my behalf when domestic finances go horribly off-track.

Last week, the rotten details finally came out regarding the city's 20-year, $140-million contract with Orgaworld to process our green-bin waste, which has cost taxpayers some $8 million in money-for-nothing overcharges and $1.7 million in legal expenses so far. My household bills aren't a pimple on these figures, but on the same day AG Ken Hughes released his report, we got another eye-popping invoice from our Internet-service provider, the sort where you exceed the usage cap and the company writes itself an absurd bonus cheque, like a water company that charges you a dime a drop. (If these companies wonder why their customers are reluctant to authorize direct withdrawals, surprise cash grabs like this are probably reason No. 1.)

In his report, Hughes puts the blame squarely on city staff for

URBAN COMPASS

Steve Collins

ottawa@metronews.ca

badly overestimating how much organic waste residents could produce annually for processing (80,000-100,000 tonnes, rather than 21,000-57,000). We ended up dinged for unused capacity, effectively paying Orgaworld extra millions to not process waste. Hughes also identified a pattern of sloppy analysis and decision-making without much documentation to explain any of it.

Mayor Jim Watson, taking his self-exculpatory cue from the report, was conscientious in noting that the whole fiasco had gone down on the watch of a previous council. City manager Kent Kirkpatrick apologized for not getting involved with the file, because if he had there would have been more due diligence.

Back on the home front, the most galling part of following up with the company was that they instantly pinned the blame on us. We should, the call centre drone informed us, have been monitoring our usage online. We received notice three days before the end of the billing period that we'd hit the cap.

Somehow, over the next 72 hours, our monthly bill doubled. But the buck stopped with us. What I heard from the polite and indifferent voice on the other end of the phone was, roughly translated, "You should never have trusted us in the first place."

The city is a much bigger, deeper-pocketed customer than I am and has since cleaned Orgaworld's clock in an arbitration process that mitigated some of the worst aspects of the contract and delayed the release of the AG's report. Hughes is recommending that the city now cancel the contract (eating another $10 million or so in the process) to get free of its terms. Negotiations were less successful here. The company offered to cut the overcharge in half if we agreed to yet another upsell, a more expensive package that would certainly prevent this from happening again—just like the last upsell was supposed to.

Our conclusion, however, was similar to Hughes': get ripped off once more for old times' sake, pay what it costs to get out of this abusive relationship and try to sign up with another provider on less-larcenous terms. It's taken several miserable experiences, but lessons eventually sink in. Maybe we can be our own AG after all.

Spinoff prequel.

Bob Odenkirk plays slippery lawyer Saul Goodman

Vince Gilligan is feeling the weight of expectations. How do you follow a monster hit like Breaking Bad?

The spinoff show Better Call Saul is a prequel to the Emmy-Award winning series and stars Bob Odenkirk, who plays everyone's favourite greasy lawyer Saul Goodman. Asked whether revisiting the same world he created posed new challenges, Gilligan acknowledged it was daunting.

"It's always daunting," he said, adding that it would also be a challenge if it were a completely new show and a whole new universe.

"The chips will fall where they may," he said. "But anything worth doing is worth taking the risk of abject humiliating failure over."

Gilligan was speaking at a television critics conference in Los Angeles to promote the upcoming fall season.

Gilligan said he wanted to do a prequel because he was still intrigued by the slippery Saul character. He said other beloved characters, such as meth distributor Gus Fring (played by Giancarlo Esposito) could be back as well.

"We're figuring out just how, if and when to perhaps see some of these characters," says Gilligan.

Meanwhile, the prequel will be set in 2002, before Saul meets Walter White, who is played by Bryan Cranston.

Michael McKean (This is Spinal Tap) joins the cast along with Michael Mando (Orphan Black) and Jonathan Banks from Breaking Bad as the fixer Mike Ehrmantraut.

Like Breaking Bad, the show is shot in Albuquerque, N.M. The first episode was directed by Gilligan.

Coming in 2015

The show was originally slotted for November, but has now been delayed until 2015 for the 10-episode first season.

- The reason? Gilligan told television critics he is "slow-as-mud as a TV writer. I always have been."
- Thankfully, AMC and Sony allowed Gilligan to write Better Call Saul at a "stately" pace.
- "We want to think everything through and I think that pays dividends," says Gilligan.

Noel Clarke shoots for the stars

Former Doctor Who co-star Noel Clarke has his sights set on the Star Wars franchise next, and personally he likes his odds of landing a role, according to the Belfast Telegraph. "I know that they've got three main films happening over the next five or six years, and they have one spinoff film in between each one, so I've got five chances to get in one — that's all I'm concerned about," says Clarke, who worked with new Star Wars director J.J. Abrams on Star Trek Into Darkness previously. "I want to be in one at some point, and so if I can do that, I'll be happy. I'll be a granddad by that time, but if I can get in one, I'll be chuffed."

Naturally, fans online freaked out, because that's what going online is for. I guess everyone was supposed to know it was a hoax because of this patently ridiculous quote at the end of the article attributed to Netflix CEO Reed Hastings: "A woman's place is in the home, in the kitchen, taking care of children. A woman in jail? How does anyone watch this show in the first place?" That's ... just not good, even as satire. Hey, Empire News? You're doing it wrong.

Nick Cannon may be playing Richard Pryor in an upcoming biopic. That's an excellent choice. It will make a great double-bill with Ryan Seacrest's expected gritty turn as Lenny Bruce.

BBC publishes a public plea for people not to share the contents and secrets of five Doctor Who scripts leaked to the web. That was the well-considered thing to do, because without that plea I wouldn't have known to go look for those scripts.

Sharon Stone is a national treasure, if for no other reason than how she talks about her butt. The stunning 56-year-old recently told E! But now I'm going on vacation

REASONS

Poor excuses for staying in debt

Bad with money?

There are no good reasons for not getting yourself out of debt

GAIL
VAZ-OXLADE
Gail blogs daily at gailvazoxlade.com

Every time I think I've heard it all, someone pops up with a new way to excuse the fact that their money management is in the crapper. Here are some of my faves:

We got a consolidation loan and paid off our credit cards, so we're doing better.

Really, you paid off your debt with other debt? That's not paid off, my little chickadee — that's delusional.

Consolidation makes sense when you reduce your interest costs and then work aggressively to repay the debt. But if you're sitting back smugly because you've reduced your payments so you have more money to spend on rubbish, I want to reach out and slap you.

Consolidating using a mortgage is one of the more time-honoured ways of making debt more expensive over the long term. Lots of people consolidate using the equity in their homes. Then they pretend that everything is OK, because now it's "mortgage debt" and that's good debt, isn't it? Hey, tell the truth. It's still consumer credit; it's just been shuffled to somewhere you don't have to look at it. And believe me, it's costing you.

Deal with your debt by giving up just half an hour of couch-potato time twice a week for budgeting. ISTOCK

I worked with one couple who re-mortgaged their home three times to cover their uncontrolled overspending. Over the life of their mortgage, they had increased their interest costs from about $150,000 to almost $600,000.

Sure it's a lot of debt, but hey, everybody's in debt, so what's the big deal?

And if everyone were running screaming off the side of a cliff, you'd do that, too, right?

There's no question that debt has become so commonplace that it seems like everyone's in it. And if you grew up in a family that had it all, including the debt, you may think this is "normal." I worked with one couple that was so comfortable with their debt that they had never made a mortgage payment from cash flow. Every single mortgage payment had come from their line of credit.

If debt seems like a normal state of being for you, it means you have to change your thinking. Debt is not normal for someone who is financially healthy. You can make the choice to remain delusional, or you can choose financial stability. The old way may be more fun, at least in the short term, but the new way will keep you and your family safe and sound.

I don't have time to budget.

Really, your most important resource and you don't have the time to manage it? Could it be that your priorities are a little skewed?

On average we spend about three hours every day watching TV. So you only need to reallocate a measly half-hour twice a week to money management to go from being a financial slug to smart about your money.

Close in hand with this goes, "You have to have money to make a budget work." One young lady wrote me to say that her parents had recommended she use a budget and her response was, "You have to have money to make a budget work, right Gail?" Believe it or not, she was asking me to tell her a budget was pointless. Really?

Sadly, people don't think that all that dough they bring in that goes to paying the rent or buying food is "money." For them, only the stuff they can spend indulging their whims is "money." And so they don't make a budget and look for ways to trim. Or perhaps it is because if they made a budget, they would discover just how much money they were blowing every month on stuff, and would have to change their behaviour. Lord forbid!

My partner is the problem.

I've met couples where one person is the major culprit in acquiring debt. The other person stands meekly by as Mr. or Mrs. I-have-to-have-everything charges them into a debt hole. They shrug and claim to have no ability to change their partner's behaviour. Here's my big question: Is this the way you're going to live the rest of your life, walking a tightrope, waiting for the axe to fall? And if you have children, do you think this is creating any sense of security for them?

For as many couples that I've met where one partner claims the other is the problem, I've met couples where they are both, in their own inimitable way, doing dumb things. One husband claimed his wife was the problem because she went shopping every day at work during lunch, bringing home items that she'd hide from him. He saw nothing wrong with dropping $10K on a new motorcycle. That's a lot of skirts, dude!

If you're still making excuses about why you're in debt, maybe it's because you're not yet committed to getting out of debt. Some people aren't. They haven't heard the whistle blow that tells them the train is headed straight for 'em.

Here's to not drinking to your health

Giving up even casual drinking could literally do your heart good. ISTOCK

A glass or two of booze is good for your heart, according to long-standing medical advice drinkers are fond of citing.

But, according to a study published last week, this cherished invitation to say "cheers" is well off the mark.

Reducing even light consumption of alcohol will not only improve your chances against coronary heart disease, but also help you lose weight and ease high blood pressure, it said.

Writing in the British Medical Journal, researchers carried out a survey of 50 published studies into the drinking habits and health of more than 260,000 people of European descent.

They looked especially at those with a key variant of a gene called ADH1B. Previous research has found that a single change in the DNA code in this gene makes people less sensitive to drink, and thus less at risk from alcoholism.

The study discovered that individuals with the variant drank 17 per cent fewer units of alcohol per week and were 78 per cent less likely to binge-drink than those without it.

They also had a 10 per cent lower risk of coronary heart disease and enjoyed lower systolic blood pressure and body mass index (BMI).

Independent commentators said the study is interesting, not least because it challenges what is now almost dogma. But, they cautioned, the debate is far from over. AFP

30 minutes or less

Here's a great way to have your steak and eat it, too!

Ingredients

- 4 oz New York strip steak
- 3 cups chopped napa cabbage
- 3 cups chopped romaine lettuce
- 1 cup sliced red bell peppers
- 1 cup sugar snap peas, cut in half
- 3/4 cup diced orange segments
- 1/3 cup sliced red onion
- 3 tbsp chopped cilantro
- 3 tbsp chopped toasted cashews

Dressing

- 2 tbsp hoisin sauce
- 1 tbsp fresh lemon juice
- 2 tbsp low-sodium soy sauce
- 1 1/2 tsp minced garlic
- 1 tsp chopped ginger
- 1 1/2 tsp honey
- 1/2 tsp hot sauce

TOTAL TIME
ABOUT 30
MINUTES

This recipe serves four. ROSE REISMAN

Lean meat is an excellent source of protein and is low in fat and saturated fat. The key to eating red meat is to enjoy it as a side to a meal rather than the main course.

The leanest meats include top sirloin, flank, New York sirloin and beef tenderloin.

You want to minimize the fatty steaks including rib-eye, porterhouse and skirt steak.

This Asian-flavored salad combines Napa cabbage and romaine, along with sweet orange segments, sugar snap peas and toasted cashews.

The tasty light dressing has a base of a ginger-hoisin sauce that complements the salad beautifully.

If your guests love steak, you can easily double the portion since two ounces is acceptable in terms of calories and fat. Feel free to substitute grilled chicken breast, pork, shrimps or tofu for the beef.

Directions

1. Grill the steak just until cooked to your preference. Cool for 10 minutes, then slice thinly.

2. On a large serving platter, add the cabbage, lettuce, bell peppers, peas, orange segments, onion, cilantro, cashews and steak slices.

3. To make the dressing: Combine the hoisin, lemon juice, soy sauce, garlic, ginger, honey and hot sauce and pour over top.

Facing adversity? Why we quit

LESSONS FROM THE DESERT
Stéfan Danis
life@metronews.ca

The severe market crash in October 2008 changed my life. I started running to regain my health, both emotional and physical. Shortly after I took my first steps, I ran the Gobi March in China in June '09, followed by the Atacama Crossing in Chile in '10 and the Sahara Race in Egypt in '11. In this post, I share a lesson learned from my experience running deserts.

Every day, someone we know quits their job, quits on their health, quits a marriage, or quits on themselves. It is an epidemic. In my experience of multi-day desert running events, while 20 to 40 per cent of athletes do not finish, once athletes pass their "hump days" they almost never quit. But when is hump day? In many ways, be it in a race or in life, when hump day occurs is arbitrary; we decide when it is. However, the quitting pattern is obvious.

Our "quitting quotient" — the likelihood we will give up on or abandon a project — is determined mainly by our mental relationship with what lies ahead. If the task feels insurmountable, our level of fighting spirit and motivation sinks. "I can't do another day — the worst has yet to come" are words I heard many times in the desert. Yet, at the same time, I heard just the opposite from other runners in the same situation: "I've passed hump day — the worst is behind me." The motivation levels of this second group of runners soared. Statistically, in a five-day desert race, where athletes run a marathon on each of the first four days and a double marathon on the fifth, most of the quitting occurs after days one and two, rarely after day three, and never after day four — although the next day is the most physically punishing. By then, quitting is no longer an option as we see "light at the end of the tunnel."

Sometimes you hit your "quitting quotient" earlier than expected. iSTOCK

Of course, life hands us many things that we are better off quitting if we perceive better and healthier opportunities elsewhere.

What the lesson is for all of us, however, when grinding through a rough patch in life or in the desert, is to adopt an "I will do this" mindset as opposed to hoping to get passed the elusive hump day. STÉPHANE DANIS IS THE CEO OF NEXCAREER AND MANDRAKE, AND THE AUTHOR OF GOBI RUNNER.

A job hunting guide for new grads

GANDHI
life@metronews.ca

Now that graduation has come and gone, it's time for the Class of 2014 to jump-start the job search. It can be hard for new grads to figure out how best to sell themselves when their work experiences consist of part-time positions and internships.

Caroline Ghosn is here to help. As the founder and CEO of Levo, an organization that mentors young women entering the workforce, she's often asked for tips and advice. Here are her suggestions for recent grads.

Show your resumé over and over again

"The biggest mistake new grads make is that they don't get a second set of eyes to look at their resumé," says Ghosn. She suggests finding three or four trusted friends or colleagues to review your resumé and make suggestions.

"That sounds like a lot," Ghosn admits, "but your resumé is only going to change for the better. You look at your resumé over and over, and you start to miss things. The third or fourth editor will really help you tighten it up."

Tell a story

Don't worry if you think your resumé is a little light on experience. "It's all about how to tell the story and making the story about your transferable skills," says Ghosn. "You have to figure out how you can connect the dots. Let's say you were the social chair of a student organization or a fraternity or sorority. Your skills would be managing timelines, budgets and logistics." And don't discount retail or food services positions. "I've never learned more about stakeholder management than when I was a waitress," Ghosn notes. "You learn how to approach people who want you to fix their problems immediately."

Be passionate

Don't worry if you appear a bit nervous at your first few interviews. "What interviewers are looking for is not someone that is stoic and cool as a cucumber," says Ghosn. "Interviewers are looking for passion, not perfection."

An interview wardrobe must-have

Ghosn says every new grad should have a good blazer in the closet to complete an appropriate business look. "It makes a casual outfit instantly more professional," she says.

Don't be intimidated

"You have everything you need as a young grad to succeed.

You've graduated! Now grab those resumés and get out there. iSTOCK

You are coming into this new world as a digital native and possess skills that other people are learning now," Ghosn says. "Focus on the things you have to offer."

Spending smart: Tips for new grads

Money. Learning how to budget is imperative for graduates who are out on their own

life@metronews.ca

You've managed to make it through college, but there are more responsibilities ahead in your independent adult life, especially financial ones.

Andrea Woroch, a money expert and frequent contributor for The Today Show, breaks down the dos and don'ts for college grads who are just stepping out into the real world.

Don't rip through all those cash-filled envelopes you get after graduating.

According to Woroch there are several ways to invest graduation money. If you have a job already, use the money to buy appropriate work attire.

If you're still on the job hunt, make sure you have all the materials you need for an interview, such as an interview outfit and the basics like a resumé and cover letter.

If you already have a job lined up, use the money to pay off a chunk of student loans or credit card debt. It also never hurts to have a backup emergency fund. Establish rules about borrowing money from your parents.

Communication is key. Woroch says to establish that you're actively hunting for a job from the get-go. Be open about your expenses, such as rent or transportation, so your parents know you're not just blowing money on unnecessary things. If you're still living at home, learn how to budget.

"Parents can be really great guides in terms of helping you save money," says Woroch. "I know someone whose mother charged him rent while living at home towards college. It might have been around $300 — not a huge amount — but enough for him to realize that he had to stretch his dollars."

And keep track of your expenses so you can see where all your money goes. A free online money tracking system, such as mint.com, lets you see all your financial accounts in one place. The website uses easy-on-the-eyes pie charts and graphs to show where your money is going every month. Decide which expenses are most important.

Almost everyone needs to have Internet and a cellphone for access to emails, job opportunities and basic communication. What recent college graduates don't need these days is cable service.

"Cut down on TV," says Woroch, who recommends streaming TV shows and movies online. Also, you can save on a cellphone bill if you get a plan with your friends. Consider joining a credit union.

"Credit unions are like a bank, but they are (non-profit) organizations, which means that the money they make goes back to the members," says Woroch. Credit unions have no hidden fees (usually lower if any), offer cheaper rates and higher interest on your savings account than banks. They can also offer lower interest rates on mortgage. "It's a smart place for young

Easy money tips

- Cut down on the electricity bill by unplugging appliances or electronics you're not using. As long as a plug is still in a socket, it's still sucking energy.
- When it comes to buying furniture, save money by looking into things that are used but in good condition.
- Shop smart and avoid buying dry-clean only clothes, as cleaning costs can add up over time.

college graduates to invest their money and keep it secure, especially considering they may have financial struggles."

Don't just accept — negotiate. When applying for positions, do your research to find out what a fair wage is in that job. Always try to negotiate your salary if there's a possibility.

But Woroch advises not to just "look at the money, but at what the position is. Look at your future opportunities with that company." Your best bet is to find an entry-level position at a company that offers upward mobility.

Don't just buy what you're used to. Woroch says that one trap recent grads fall into at the grocery store is just grabbing the brands they know and putting them in their cart. When you can, buy the generic option instead of the name-brand one. It will save you money at checkout.

You don't want to blow all your money before you even remove your graduation gown. iSTOCK

Germany reigns over Messi's World Cup

Fourth title. Tense final clinched on a majestic Mario Goetze volley in extra time

With two quick and sublimely deft touches, Mario Goetze ended Germany's 24-year wait for another World Cup title.

Goetze scored the winning goal in extra time to give Germany a 1-0 victory over Argentina on Sunday in a tight and tense World Cup final that came down to a few moments of individual skill.

Goetze, who wasn't born when West Germany beat Argentina in the 1990 final, controlled a cross with his chest in the 113th minute and in one fluid motion volleyed the ball past goalkeeper Sergio Romero and inside the far post from five metres out.

It was a goal that gave Germany its fourth World Cup title in its eighth final and left Argentine star Lionel Messi still walking in the shadow of his compatriot Diego Maradona, who led his country to the 1986 title.

Goetze went on as a substitute for Miroslav Klose toward the end of regulation time and the 22-year-old midfielder's fresh legs made the difference.

Andre Schuerle broke down the left flank, sending his cross into the area, and the Bayern Munich player did the rest with a clinical finish. The goal echoed that of Andres Iniesta's four years ago, when the midfielder scored in similar fashion but from the other side of the area to give Spain a 1-0 extra-time win over the Netherlands.

Germany's Mario Goetze volleys it into Argentina's net past goalkeeper Sergio Romero in extra time in the final of the World Cup at the Maracana Stadium in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Sunday. NATACHA PISARENKO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"It's incredible. The team did it beautifully," said Manuel Neuer, who was voted the tournamen's best goalkeeper. "At some point we'll stop celebrating but we'll still wake up with a smile."

For Germany, the win ends a string of near misses since winning its last major title at the 1996 European Championship. The team lost the 2002 World Cup final to Brazil and lost in the semifinals in both 2006 and 2010.

Argentina had not been back in the final since that 1990 loss and has now been beaten by Germany in the last three World Cups.

"This was our chance, and we felt that way. We couldn't do it. We have to lift our head and suffer the pain," Argentina midfielder Javier Mascherano said. "Obviously, the pain is tremendous. We wanted the cup for Argentina."

It is Germany's first title as a unified nation, having won as West Germany in 1954, 1974 and 1990. It was also the third final between these countries and had been billed as a matchup between Germany's machine-like unit versus the brilliance of Messi, the four-time world player of the year. But in the biggest game of his career, Messi came up short.
